UNCLAIMED U. S. FORTUNES ARE LURE OF EUROPEANS

Stories of Those Who Died Here Intestate Are Eagerly Read Abroad.

New York,-Extravagant stories of fortunds made in America have led many families in Europe to search their memories for relatives who emigrated to the New world. Newspapers are now closely scanned for the comes of those who have died leaving unclaimed fortunes. Before the war the families may or may not have been gled to near from their American kin, but today they are eager to exploit any possibility that a relative, dying intestate, left a fortune.

The post-war idea of organization has come to their assistance. In Buchares a syndlente this just been formed for the purpose of tracing the heirs to unclaimed American fortunes. The syndicate in seeking publicity expects to receive information from Rumanian families who suspect that their American kin died in affluent circumstances without remembering to make a will.

Even before the war, however, European imaginations were fired by reports of colossal unclaimed fortunes. in America. Perhaps the most romantle of these is the Horowitz fortune in San Francisco, which, since the death of Bishop Horowitz in 1888 has, It is said, increased to millions of dollars and still awaits lis legitlmate claimant. When news of the florowitz. fortune reached Europe all bearers of that name formed themselves into florowitz syndicates in those countries where bearers of the family name resided.

Another unclaimed fortune of mil thone still agitates all hearers of the name of Bernstein. Bernstein was Ilkewise a poor boy who emigrated to the United States in the '70s and died leaving bo heirs.

Food "on the Hoof" Not

What They Looked For Three unemployed miners having emigrated to South Africa, and not being successful in obtaining employment, decided to journey up country, where, far away from civilization, they came across an explorers' depot, fairly well stocked with tood,

After a few days, when the stores had become exhausted, and all three fed up, yet very hungry, one of their number decided to go in search of food, with the avowed determination to bring back something to eat even If it were a lion. He had not searched far when he encountered a lien, which was also in search of food.

The lion at once bounded toward the man, who turned and sped as rapldly as humanly possible toward the hut. On nearing the hut door, which was open, he stumbled and fell, too precipitately for the lion to recover, which bounded into the but. When the man picked himself up, he quickly pulled the hut door to, and shouted to his mates inside: "Here you are! Skin that whilst I tetch another,"-London Answers.

STYLES CHANGE IN TRADE FAIRS

Were Necessity in Middle Ages for the Disposal of Goods

Washington.-The opening of the spring industrial fuir in Leipzig, Germany, where trade fairs of some sort have been held annually for 760 years, emphasizes at once the age of this method of carrying on trade, and the changes that have been made under modern conditions of mass production, modern transportation, and wide distribution, says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Fairs, as devices through which to dispose of goods, were in use in Europe during the early centuries of the Christian era, and became important in the Middle Ages," the bulletin declares. "It was then that two of the most outstanding fairs of today took shape, that at Lyons, France, and that at Leipzig. The latter dates from about 1170. One of the best known fairs, that at Nizhnii Novgorod, Russla, was not founded until the Seventeenth century, but since that time it has been of great importance to the diversified peoples from the Orient who gathered there to exchange their

"Goods Fairs" at First.

"These and the many similar fairs that existed in Europe were at first goods fairs,' to which were brought great quantities of the actual goods to be bartered or sold. There was no standardization of products in those days and no cheap and efficient transportation systems; and the standards of husiness ethics were low. It was essential that the actual goods to be bought should be handled, examined, and haggled over.

"After railroads criss-crossed Eu rope and "sample runners" (the European version of 'drummers' or commercial salesmen) were sent out in increasing numbers by manufacturers, the goods fairs were no longer necessary in the commercial scheme of things. A number of the old fairs went out of existence under these conditions. Others, notably the Leip zig and Lyons fairs, modified their methods and have become of even more importance. Instead of assembling goods in great warehouses for sale, fairs now bring together hundreds and thousands of articles as samples. Would-be buyers come from all parts of the world, examine the samples, confidently accept the word of agents that goods furnished by the factories will be us represented, and place their orders,

Sample Fair Rises Rapidly.

"The rise of the sample fair has been most pronounced since the World war. Among the leading ones now operating, in addition to those at Leipalg and Lyons, are fairs at Paris, London, Birmingham, Vienna, Prague, Gutenberg, Salonica and Vatencia, to men tion only a few.

"While some modern sample fairs deal with a practically unlimited varlety of products, others specialize in certain classifications, Leipzig is probably the greatest of the broad fairs. Lyons, too, has a variety of products, but emphasizes sille. The Paris fair concerns liself largely with French goods, and the London and Birming ham fairs are exclusively for British products. The sample fair in its broad er aspects has not yet become establisted in the United States, but may te on the way."

Abundant Proof That Animals Change Color

Though many an animal in the Arctic regions will change its coat to white for the winter months; there are few animals who turn gray, as human beings do, from old age. Animals are, however, susceptible to fright and shock, and this may cause their hair or fur to change to white, just as in the case of human beings. Domestic pets are naturally more susceptible to this than animals who are used to fending for themselves in the wild. Soldering Aluminum

Contrary to general opinion, soldered joints in aluminum are easily made and are as strong when dest made as other metals. They fall, however, without exception a few weeks or even hours after exposure to mild corrostres, because during soldering, the solder dissolves some of the aluminum, forming piloys, generally of the or zine. There corrode so readily they even disintegrate in damp nir, but where complete protection is afforded, as by painting, immersion in oil, etc., soldering is sometimes very useful. This protection is obviously rather impractleable in the case of ptensils.
